

Drone Photography by Scott Hicks

After spending a weekend near Elk Park and Beech Mountain, Scott Hicks of Forcefield Web in The Guilford Building (Room 511) brought us some aerial photos and talked about the fun he's been having with his drone.

"I've been doing amateur photography for years," says Scott. "The ability to put a high-quality camera into the sky has created a next-level obsession with the art form. I am particularly fascinated with how repeating organic patterns, zoomed-in tightly or zoomed out far away, start to look the same. Some of these top-down photographs of fall leaves are almost indistinguishable from coral reefs, for example."

"Forcefield has been in The Guilford Building for over 15 years. We do everything from custom web database work to basic turnkey website design, plus everything inside that process – including server hosting. Get in touch if you are looking for application consulting or website development. I am also happy to discuss our abilities in the areas of photography and drone work." scott@forcefieldnc.com
